- Meeting Topic: System i Access for Windows/Q&A; System i Access Family: What's new?

System i Access (formerly "iSeries Access" but what many of us are still calling "Client Access") has a family of products that offer the best end-user connectivity products in the marketplace for System i customers! An overview of the newest products and latest enhancements in existing products will be covered.

System i Access for Windows: We'll review some of the functions in the Windows product and take a look at what's new: e.g., the new install mechanism, the Windows Installer technology (the .msi format), which is currently available as a Technology Preview and will be available in the next release.

System i Access for Web: If you want a solution that requires no PC administration and enables users to work with System i resources fast and easily through a Web browser, then System i Access for Web is what you're looking for! See how 5250 emulation, printers and printer output, database, and IFS access (and more) can be accessed from a browser.

System i Access for Linux: We'll look an overview of what functions are available with this native Linux client.

- Presenter: Linda Hirsch Linda Hirsch has been with IBM for 23 years, holding a variety of programming and technical marketing roles in the IBM Rochester, Minnesota Development Lab. Linda's current focus is client integration technologies and support for System i Access products. She is a regular speaker at the IBM System i Technical Conference, at many local user groups, and other national System i technical conferences.
